While he himself worked on the D. Jones ranch. Hence imagine his surprise as he now comes back a prospector to see so thrifty a little place, and the ranch that sold for $1,800 when he left he stated a low would likely take $7,000 to touch it.

Mr. Daugherty, Secretary of the Commercial Club at Artesia writes us this week to please him on the Leader list for a year's subscription. That is the way the Leader likes to see them come. When business men of other towns become interested enough to send for the paper it must be another assurance that our little Plains town is full of thrift and interest, and that the Leader's feeble efforts to portray it are not all lost.

The Socialists state that they will have a speaking at Lovington June 26. Dr. Lassater of Plainview, N. M. being one of them. They cordially invite everyone to attend.

After attending a round-up and branding at his home until about six o'clock in the afternoon, he and three other boys Lymas Strickland, John Howell, and Bud Wilkerson's little boy, went to a large lake of water to go in bathing. After arriving at the lake, John Crosby, Lymas Strickland, and the Wilkerson boy entered the water while John Howell was lying on the bank after having been in the water just a short time. John Crosby had gotten quite a distance from the other boys and was in water eight feet deep when he began to cramp. He hollered for the other boys to come to him, he was sinking. They swam out and tried to rescue him but after a hard struggle found it was impossible. As he was sinking his time the boys left the water and went for more help. After returning they tried in vain, but were unable to find the body until 8 o'clock. Next morning the body was taken to Kenna where funeral services were held, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Kenna cemetery.

He leaves a father, mother, two sisters, and four brothers and many friends to mourn his loss.

And, with its 400 seating capacity will prove quite an addition to our town.

Mr. Love reports that question more satisfactory this year than last.
